'Spiritual' fitness clubs probed for unpaid taxes

Three of New York's trendiest fitness clubs may be putting a spiritual spin on their services as a way of avoiding sales taxes, but state Attorney General Eric Schneiderman isn't having it, Crains reports.

Schneiderman last week issued subpoenas for unpaid sales taxes to SoulCycle, Flywheel Sports and Bar Method. The subpoenas are investigative and the companies have not been accused of any wrongdoing. EMILY JOHNSON

"Our lives are on hold," Dos Santos told Metro.

Dos Santos, 45, is from Brazil, and unlike heterosexual spouses his husband, Oseland, 50, cannot apply for him to legally stay because federal law does not recognize same-sex marriage.

A Supreme Court decision, expected this summer, could change that, as could an alteration of the law under the immigration reform Congress is considering.

Robert Lassègue, 33, and Manuel Reyes, 35, are crossing their fingers.

Married in 2011 at City

"I would like to ask straight couples, would they like to carry a license that's only valid in one state?" Lassègue said.

For now, the couples take it day by day.

"It will happen," Dos Santos says. "If it doesn't happen now, we just keep on fighting. I don't see any other way to go."

Standoff. Police kill Trenton barricade suspect, find bodies

After a tense, 37-hour standoff involving three children, police shot and killed 38-year-old Trenton, N.J., barricade suspect Gerald Tyrone Murphy early yesterday morning, officials announced.

Murphy is accused of killing girlfriend Carmelita Stevens, 44, and her 13-year-old son about two weeks ago inside a two-story rental house.

Amid the decomposing bodies, Murphy allegedly held hostage three more of Stevens' children — a 4-year-old boy and two girls, aged 16 and 18. All three were reported safe.

Police nearby witnessed the robbery and gave chase. They captured one of the men, Charles Hackett, 23. The other made it to a silver vehicle and drove off.

Mermaid Parade sets big fundraising goal

The Mermaid Parade is on thin ice after superstorm Sandy.
GETTY IMAGES

Coney Island. A new Kickstarter campaign is raising $100,000 so the parade can happen.

When Hurricane Sandy tore through Coney Island six months ago, it devastated local businesses and also ruined the building that hosted operations for the Mermaid Parade.

But thanks to a new Kickstarter campaign, the Mermaid Parade appears to be making a comeback. Organizers have raised nearly half of the $100,000 that they estimate that they will need in order to hold the 2013 Coney Island Mermaid Parade.

"The Mermaid Parade isn't just mine," Dick Zigun said in a video posted on the campaign's Kickstarter page.

Zigun is the self-proclaimed "unofficial mayor of Coney Island" whose non-profit Coney Island USA also runs the local museum and freak show.

The money raised will go toward portable toilets, permits, security and insurance.

If the organizers meet their goal, the parade is set for June 22.

Queens group fights to block park purchase

Controversy.

People in Queens are trying to stop a billionaire sheik from buying 13 acres to build a soccer stadium.

The Fairness Coalition of Queens, a group that works to protect Flushing Meadows-Corona Park, rallied outside the United Arab Emirates embassy on Friday to protest the move.

Councilman Peter Vallone does not want the city to sell 13 acres of Flushing Meadows-Corona Park land to Sheik Mansour bin Zayed al-Nahyan of the U.A.E.

Nahyan, a billionaire member of the Abu Dhabi royal family, wants to build a 35,000-seat soccer stadium in the park for a new Major League Soccer franchise, Vallone said.

The city could do this for $1, Vallone said.

But as far as Queens resident Leandra Requena is concerned, "Our park is not for sale."

Nahyan owns the English franchise Manchester City. His bid to buy the stadium has also encountered resistance because of concerns about his country's humanitarian credentials: the Fairness Coalition said it represses human rights.

Crime. NYPD rescues three women forced into prostitution

Thanks to both a former prostitute and a resourceful mom in Connecticut, the NYPD rescued a missing 17-year-old girl in East Harlem on Thursday.

The girl's mother called 911 around 11:27 a.m. on Thursday morning and told them she suspected her daughter was being held against her will with two other women at 1695 Madison Ave., cops said. She told them her daughter's abductor was a pimp.

According to a law enforcement source, one of the other women that had been staying in the apartment tipped off the mother to where her daughter was.

Cops arrested the suspected pimp, and then found the missing girl and two other women, ages 21 years old and 24 years old, cops said.

The suspected pimp, 35-year-old Taye Elleby, was arrested, and cops say

Physical abuse

- Police said Elleby used the website Backpage.com to arrange "dates" for them.

- Cops believe intimidation and physical abuse were used to force the women into prostitution.

- They also reportedly found the 24-year-old's two children in the apartment.

they determined in interviews with him that he forced at least one of the women into prostitution using intimidation and physical abuse, and then he kept the proceeds.

The three victims reportedly told police that Elleby set up "dates" for them, cops said.

GOP demands probe of tax scrutiny of conservative groups

Closer review.

Groups with "Tea Party" or "patriot" in their names were flagged by the IRS.

Republican lawmakers called yesterday for a broad investigation of the U.S. tax agency's acknowledgement that its agents had singled out conservative political groups for more scrutiny, and demanded that President Barack Obama make clear the action was unacceptable.

"This is something we cannot let stand. It needs to have a full investigation," House of Representatives Intelligence Committee Chairman Mike Rogers, a Michigan Republican, said on "Fox News Sunday."

"I don't care if you're a conservative, a liberal, a Democrat or a Republican, this should send a chill up your spine," Rogers added.

In a practice that drew complaints during the 2012 general election campaign, nonprofit advocacy groups with the words "Tea Party" or "patriot" in their names were flagged for closer review by the Internal Revenue Service when they applied to the agency for tax-exempt status. Such groups may focus on issues, but may not directly support any candidate.

"This is truly outrageous and it contributes to the profound mistrust that the American people have in government," Sen. Susan Collins, a Maine Republican, said on CNN's

"State of the Union." "The president needs to make crystal clear that this is totally unacceptable in America."

Collins said she also doubted the IRS' claim that the groups were targeted as part of an "inappropriate" organizing technique by a few bureaucrats in the agency's tax-exempt section, rather than for political reasons.

President Barack Obama's administration fought back against Republican accusations that it covered up details of last year's deadly assault on a U.S. mission in Libya, after a news report that memos on the incident were edited to omit a CIA warning about a threat from al Qaeda.

The report by ABC News gave new momentum to the partisan flap over whether the administration tried to avoid casting the attack as terrorism when the presidential election was less than two months away.

Authorities, who separately announced on Friday a criminal probe into the blast, said no evidence linked Reed's arrest to the April 17 fertilizer plant disaster that killed 14 people and injured about 200 in West — a point Reed's attorney echoed in his first comments about the charge. REUTERS

The mother of Gina Dejesus celebrated the "best Mother's Day" ever yesterday after her daughter was freed with three other captives last week from a long imprisonment in a Cleveland home.

Mothers' Day has a changed meaning for fellow captive Amanda Berry, who during 10 years in captivity lost her mother and conceived and bore her own child, who DNA indicates was fathered by accused kidnapper Ariel Castro, police and prosecutors said.

There was no homecoming for the fourth captive, Michelle Knight, 32, the longest-held, who slipped into seclusion after being released from a hospital on Friday. She shunned hospital visits from family members, some of whom believed she was a runaway when she disappeared 11 years ago after losing custody of her young son, her grandmother said.

Pakistan's Sharif poised to form government after win

Defeat. Former cricket star Imran Khan's party put up a strong fight.

Toppled in a 1999 military coup, jailed and exiled, Pakistan's Nawaz Sharif has made a triumphant election comeback and looks set to form a stable government capable of implementing reforms needed to rescue the fragile economy.

Sharif may not win enough seats to rule on his own but has built up enough momentum to avoid having to form a coalition with his main rivals, former cricketer Imran Khan's Tehrik-i-Insaf and the Pakistan People's Party.

The steel magnate held off a challenge from Khan, who had hoped to break decades of dominance by Sharif's Pakistan Muslim League and the PPP, led by the Bhutto family.

The two parties have formed governments whenever the military, the most powerful institution in the nuclear-armed nation, has allowed civilian rule.

Khan put up a strong fight, and he is likely to remain a force in politics — possibly becoming the main opposition figure. The PPP, which led the government for the last five years, has done badly and could come in third place.

Television channels said of the results declared by yesterday evening, Sharif's PML-N had captured 94 of the 272 contested National Assembly seats.

Based on trends, it was likely to get around 130, and should easily be able to make up the required majority of 137 with support from independents and small parties. REUTERS

Turkey says world must act against Syria after bombings

Turkey accused a group with links to Syrian intelligence of carrying out car bombings that killed 46 people in a Turkish border town, and said yesterday it was time for the world to act against the government of President Bashar al-Assad.

The two car bombs, which ripped through crowded shopping streets in Reyhanli on Saturday, increased fears that Syria's civil war is dragging in neighboring states, despite renewed diplomatic moves to end it.

Damascus denied involvement, but Turkish Foreign Minister Ahmet Davutoglu said those behind the attacks were from an "old Marxist terrorist organization" with ties to Assad's administration. REUTERS

Syrian war death toll rises to 82,000

At least 82,000 people have been killed and 12,500 others are missing after two years of civil war in Syria, the opposition Syrian Observatory for Human

Most of the dead were killed by troops and militia loyal to President Bashar al-Assad and most of the missing are believed to have been detained by the government's secret police and other loyalists, the monitoring group said. REUTERS

Grad school in a van (not down by the river)

Books. Ken Ilgunas wrote a story on his cheap and adventurous path to a grad degree.

Students in the U.S. now live in the shadow of a collective total of one trillion dollars of debt. For Ken Ilgunas, escaping that debt was a matter of determination — and he was willing to live in a van to prove it. In his new book, “Walden on Wheels: On the Open Road from Debt to Freedom,” Ilgunas enumerates, with considerable grace and humor, his adventures living in a red Econoline van, retrofitted for graduate school at Duke University.

After graduating with just over $30,000 in debt from his undergraduate education at the University of Buffalo, Ilgunas threw every particle of his being and hour of wakefulness toward paying it off. He got used to a lifestyle of roughing it while living in a tent as a back country ranger and hitchhiked to Alaska where he worked a variety of jobs.

Two and a half years later, he had paid off his debt. He vowed that he wouldn't go into that hole again — but he wasn't ready to give up on the life of a scholar.

So, Ilgunas sent out applications to graduate schools that fit his academic standards as well as his climactic ones — after all, temperature is a big deal if you're planning to live in a van on the campus parking lot.

“Most of the sacrifices [of van living] were more social. You can't bring friends to your van to have a couple drinks and watch a movie,” he says, with a self-effacing laugh. “The thought of telling a girl that I lived in a van in a place like Duke ... it was just horrifying.”

Ken Ilgunas has a meal in the spacious dining room of his van. / PROVIDED

Though Ilgunas lived in fear of being caught by campus police, he got away with studying in the library and showering at the campus gym. For him, it was worth it because of the education he was getting in liberal studies, where he could take courses across a variety of disciplines.

“One course might contain elements of several disciplines — history, biology, neuroscience — all wrapped into one. You can find yourself reading Jane Austen alongside a science document,” he says. “That unconventional approach often leads to breakthroughs.” In Ilgunas' mind, it gave him the freedom he didn't always have in his constricted lifestyle.

Ultimately, Ilgunas relished the experienced. “I always felt deep down that I was meant to live a free and adventure-filled life,” he says. The van-dwelling made both of these things possible.

“People kind of think of their student debt as almost another inevitable payment, something like car insurance that you're expected to pay every month for 25 years. I wanted to take a much more radical approach,” he says.

Ilgunas' radical approach to life and unique sense of humor is what makes “Walden on Wheels” a great read. But debt-conscious students should be forewarned — the Duke University handbook has now been updated with a clause that bans living in a van.

Q&A

What is your advice to students now?

I would say don't listen to what some people say about the liberal arts. I think it's silly to deride them as a waste of time, that's like saying a walk in the woods or having a child [is]; these things aren't entirely practical, but we don't deride them.

We check in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Lena Dunham didn't ask for this and Seth Rogen is trying to be more of a guy.

@lenadunham: Too many free vibrators sent to my office! Genuinely appreciate gifts, but there's something so invasive about an unrequested vibrator.

@Sethrogen: Go sports team! I hope you beat the sports team you are competing against in the sport you are playing!

What will not be on your TV come fall

In case you missed it, a lot of shows were axed by the big "alphabet" networks on Friday. NBC gave word that "The New Normal," "1600 Penn.," "Guys With Kids," "Up All Night," "Whitney," "Smash," "Go On," "Rock Center" and "Deception" are no longer.

CBS has canned "CSI: New York" along with long-running comedy "Rules of Engagement." And ABC canceled "Happy Endings," "Malibu Country," "How To Live With Your Parents," "Body of Proof," "Red Widow" and "Family Tools."

Jeff Hanneman died from alcohol-related cirrhosis of the liver

When famed guitarist Jeff Hanneman of Slayer died last week, many reported he succumbed to a flesh-eating bacteria he contracted through a spider bite years earlier. It seemed sort of right that necrotizing fasciitis would be his downfall; it just sounded so epically metal. (Not mention that Necrotizing Fasciitis would be a sick name for a metal band.) But, sadly, it was not the case. In a statement, the remaining members of Slayer said that Hanneman's death at the age of 49 was from alcohol-related cirrhosis of the liver. "While he had his health struggles over the years, including the recent necrotizing fasciitis infection that devastated his well-being, Jeff and those close to him were not aware of the true extent of his liver condition until the last days of his life," the band said in a statement posted on its website. Hanneman was reportedly on the transplant list for a new liver.

Seth Meyers will replace Jimmy Fallon on 'Late Night'

"SNL" star and head writer Seth Meyers has been tapped to take over Jimmy Fallon's spot on "Late Night," NBC announced yesterday. Meyers will begin at the 12:35 a.m. time slot next year when current host Jimmy Fallon moves to "The Tonight Show." "We think Seth is one of the brightest, most insightful comedy writers and performers of his generation," said NBC entertainment chairman Bob Greenblatt. "His years at 'SNL's Weekend Update desk, not to mention being head writer of the show for many seasons, helped him hone a topical brand of comedy that is perfect for the 'Late Night' franchise."

Poehler is dating Nick Kroll

"Parks and Recreation" star Amy Poehler is reportedly dating comedian Nick Kroll, her first romance since splitting with husband Will Arnett last September — aka the most bummed celeb breakup ever — according to Us Weekly. "She was looking for a guy like him," a source says. "She wanted a comedian who 'gets' her." Kroll's played a recurring role on her sitcom since 2011.

"The Rachel" came out of being high

It turns out one of the most iconic hairstyles of the '90s was created under the influence. Chris McMillan says he was stoned when he created "the Rachel," Jennifer Aniston's "Friends"-era haircut that became a huge hit, according to WWD. "I'm 14 years sober, so I feel safe enough to say that," McMillan says. I wonder what Miley Cyrus' stylist was on when she gave the pop star her latest 'do. Bath salts, perhaps?

Sorry, old sport: 'Gatsby' gets silver

Box office. People flocked to "Iron Man 3" even more than they did "The Great Gatsby."

Tony Stark's superpowers lifted blockbuster "Iron Man 3" back to the top of movie charts in the United States and Canada, beating out a strong debut over the weekend for lavish Jazz Age drama "The Great Gatsby."

Coming off a gigantic opening a week earlier, "Iron Man 3" commanded $72.5 million in ticket sales from Friday through Sunday in its second weekend. "Gatsby," starring Leonardo DiCaprio as millionaire Jay Gatsby in the classic F. Scott Fitzgerald tale, earned a strong $51.1 million, according to studio estimates.

International sales for "Iron Man 3" reached a massive $664 million through Sunday after adding $89 million from the weekend, Disney said. The film's worldwide take now stands at $949 million.

"Gatsby" outpaced pre-weekend forecasts for an opening of up to $45 million. Directed by Australian filmmaker Baz Luhrmann, it is the latest Hollywood rendition of Fitzgerald's classic American novel, "The Great Gatsby." A 1974 version starring Robert Redford and Mia Farrow fared poorly at the box office.

The majority of ticket buyers were female by 59 percent to 41 percent, and 31 percent of ticket buyers were under age 25, Warner Bros. said.

DiCaprio's performance was widely praised, but the movie, which cost about $105 million to produce, received a mixed reception from critics. As of Saturday, 48 percent of reviews recommended the film on the Rotten Tomatoes website.

Elsewhere over the weekend, dark action comedy "Pain & Gain" starring Mark Wahlberg placed a distant third with $5 million at U.S. and Canadian theaters.

Comedy "Peeples," the other new nationwide release, finished fourth with $4.9 million. Produced by Tyler Perry, the film stars Craig Robinson and Kerry Washington in the story of a well-off family's reunion that is interrupted when a man arrives to seek their daughter's hand in marriage.

Baseball drama "42" finished in fifth place with $4.7 million. REUTERS

Eli Roth hasn't directed a feature since 2007's "Hostel Part II." But he's been busy. He's enough of a name to put his on films (like "The Last Exorcism" and its sequel), and handle "Hemlock Grove," the Netflix horror series that's doing even better than "House of Cards." He co-wrote, co-produced and co-stars in "Aftershock," directed by Chilean filmmaker Nicolas Lopez, which concerns the aftermath of a massive earthquake, not unlike the one that wreaked havoc upon Chile in 2010.

Was it always the plan to let Nicolas Lopez direct it?

I'm a big fan of Nicolas Lopez's Spanish language movies. He made some terrific romantic comedies, one called "Que Pena Tu Vida," which translates to "F— My Life." There's "Que Pena Tu Boda," which is "F— My Wedding." And then there's "Que Pena Tu Familia," which is "F— My Family." We jokingly called this "F— My Hostel."

Why did Lopez want to do horror?

ELI ROTH

The filmmaker talks about helping the directors he likes make movies.

HEADING SOUTH

He started describing for me what it was like living through the 2010 earthquake [in Chile]. It was so horrific. We thought instead of making the Oscar version of this, we'd make a realistic version. We'd use it as the basis for a thriller and fictionalize it. It's all based on things that really happened. Society really unraveled in a matter of minutes.

Has Chile rebuilt since the 2010 earthquake?

One of the things about shooting there was that a lot of it was still destroyed. The set was already designed for us. They're slowly repairing, but some things they'll never be able to fix. They're too damaged. There was one scene where I was pinned under a rock and I looked around and said, "Wow, the art department did an amazing job." [Lopez] said, "Ha ha, gringo. Art department? This is real!"

Beyond the earthquake itself, this has a pretty bleak world view.

We talked about Hitchcock, and about how "The Birds" is about the randomness of life and how terrible things happen to you for absolutely no reason, with no explanation before, during or after. For me that's what life is. Life can be about dodging these horrible events that happen to us — and then you die. I think that's the unfortunate reality of how it is. How we choose to live in between that is what makes up our lives.

Some people criticize your characters for being Ugly Americans. How do you feel about them?

Obviously I like the characters, because I wrote them. I think that my characters are honest. They're not trying to please everybody. They behave like people. People in life aren't always politically correct; they don't always do the right thing. And I find so many movies boring because the characters are watered down. And that's what I try to write. It's not for me to judge.

Youngblood Hawke swims in the deep

Music. After a false start with another band, Sam Martin and Simon Katz are back with a new band to "Wake Up" the world.

To hear Youngblood Hawke's Sam Martin talk, you might imagine him some kind of environmentalist, rather than the frontman of a swiftly rising indie pop outfit. "I think it's important to conserve nature and take care of our earth," he says. "I feel like one day we're going to look, and it's going to disappear on us, and we're going to wish that we had lived a little bit differently."

He's talking about the inspiration for the music video for the band's single "We Come Running," which was filmed entirely underwater and features the band members swimming alongside live sharks. "We wanted to show people that they weren't these man-eating killers. We can't keep slaughtering these animals at the rate we're doing it, because we're going to completely wipe them out. And the ocean would die."

Indeed, Martin says that if he weren't a musician he'd probably be working in the great outdoors. But he's otherwise employed, making infectious, up-tempo electro-rock with one of his best college buds, producer Simon Katz.

Martin and Katz have been collaborating ever since the two moved from Colorado to L.A. to start their first band, Iglu & Hartly. The band enjoyed moderate success, scoring a Top 5 hit in Europe, before dissolving suddenly — and painfully, says Martin — due to strained relationships with other members. The pair seem to be in a much better place now. "I feel confident in our album and our songwriting abilities. I think we're just fortunate to be in this position right now," he says.

alexandra.cavallio@metromusic.com

Work ethic

Giving it their all

When asked to describe the band's sound, Martin hesitates. "I feel like describing music is like trying to describe a color," he says. "There's rock, there's dance, there's definitely synth and there's some pop elements to it, definitely. ... What separates us is that we have some weirder lyrics that we balance out with the pop choruses."

It's easier to articulate the band's unofficial mission statement: "We're all kind of excited about life. We just like to give people a great experience. They come to a show and buy a ticket, they should walk away feeling like we gave all of our effort to entertain them."

Sarah Polley's documentary "Stories We Tell" looks at her family's history. / ROADSIDE ATTRACTIONS

Family history that doesn't bore others

Documentary.
Actress-filmmaker Sarah Polley finds family skeletons in "Stories We Tell."

Sarah Polley's family documentary, "Stories We Tell," invokes a common dilemma: Is every personal story interesting to strangers? There eventually emerges a genuinely interesting twist in Polley's personal life, which at first seems mundane and ordinary. Oddly, it's the mundane material that proves more interesting, more cosmic than the stranger-than-fiction material that comes later.

Here's the not-quite-spoiler (arriving around the half-hour mark): Polley, a child actress turned adult actress turned filmmaker, grew up thinking that her dad was her mother's husband, Michael. In fact, her biological father was Harry Guelkin, a film producer with whom her mother, Diane, had a brief affair. Polley was not made aware of this until well into adulthood, and Guelkin spent nearly three decades without contacting his daughter.

This barnburner eventually takes up the majority of Polley's film, and it's interesting watching her and her family trying not to upset the man who raised her. Everyone, including many siblings and half-siblings from her mother's previous marriage, is extremely nice and doesn't wish to pile more despair upon the already melancholic Michael, who became a widower when his wife succumbed to cancer.

But "Stories We Tell"

Review

'Stories We Tell'

Director. Sarah Polley

Genre. Documentary

is, oddly, more profound when it's not about skeletons bursting from closets, but about something comparatively quotidian. Michael, quiet and remote, wooed Diane, a sparkplug and extrovert, who was attracted to his brain and potential. But Michael wound up putting his ambitions on hold for family life. Not unlike Michael Apted's "Up" documentary series, it's a portrait of everyday disappointment, a reminder of how most of us so easily abandon our dreams for real life.

This is not a depressing film. It's a lively and playful one, constantly cutting to staged Super 8-style recreations of moments that were never filmed, but live on in collective memory like ghosts. Polley's fiction films ("Away From Her," "Take This Waltz") are heavy, if also perceptive. It's clear from "Stories We Tell" she's her best when she doesn't appear to be trying.

A new way to approach gluten

Health. Dr. Arthur Agatston, who created the South Beach Diet, thinks that “everyone is on the gluten-sensitive spectrum.”

The gluten-free trend continues to rise, recruiting legions onto the no-wheat bandwagon. But now, it's not just people totally intolerant to gluten who are giving up the protein.

Dr. Arthur Agatston, a cardiologist who authored “The South Beach Diet” and created Southbeachdiet.com, has followed up with “South Beach Diet Gluten Solution.” The book isn't just for people diagnosed with gluten intolerance (celiac disease), he says — it's for everyone.

“I think everyone is on the gluten-sensitive spectrum to some degree,”

How to do it

Choose carefully

Choose grains carefully, cut down on beer, avoid seitan — which is highly concentrated gluten — and opt for naturally risen whole wheat bread. “When wheat is processed ... we're left with the starch, which concentrates the gluten,” says Dr. Agatston.

“People don't have to be gluten-phobic, just gluten-aware,” Dr. Agatston says. / GETTY IMAGES

says Dr. Agatston. “I am convinced it is the most under-diagnosed medical condition of our time.”

Gluten is a protein found in highest concentration in wheat, but other grains like barley have smaller amounts. Some grains like quinoa or oats have none. Gluten can damage the small intestine, which is where nutrients from food are absorbed: “If gluten is not properly digested, it begins to poke holes in the lining and harms the small intestine,” says Dr. Agatston.

The issue isn't really gluten, he says, but that

“it's in everything.”

“Our bodies are inundated with it now, creating sensitivity. ... Most of us need to be gluten-aware and restrict ourselves.”

Dr. Agatston says that lowering gluten intake can improve focus and energy, heal chronic skin conditions, relieve anxiety and depression, help with arthritis and protect against diabetes

NOISY NEIGHBORS DRIVING YOU CRAZY? HOW TO DEAL

As the saying goes, good fences make good neighbors. For many cosmopolitans, unfortunately, those proverbial fences are thin walls and creaky floors that broadcast every groan, thump or raised voice from strangers at the same address. We pay a premium for every square foot of privacy, yet unwittingly share plumbing, critters and private moments. Still, many of us know next to nothing about the lives, much less the names, of the people we pass in halls. It's a strange and uninvited intimacy.

Your frustrations are understandable. We expect our homes to be sanctuaries from the hustle and bustle of city life — which is all the more reason we get so bent out of shape by unwelcome disturbances. But you need not suffer interminably. Aside from sound-proofing, there are several things you can do to restore your sanity:

The question

I have really noisy neighbors who are driving me crazy. I hear all their personal conversations and parties, and know way too much about their sex lives. Plus they argue a lot and slam doors. I pay a lot of rent and resent having to deal with this. Any suggestions?

If this is you on a daily basis, it's OK to ask your neighbors to keep it down. / GETTY IMAGES, ZOOMAR RF

No Insurance Necessary

Kim Schneiderman, MSW, LCSW, is a psychotherapist and former journalist with a private practice in New York City.

1 Assess the situation. Acting on anger, like retaliating or slamming your door, may only aggravate the situation, and could lead them to believe that you're the problem. Unlike passengers on a packed train, these aren't pushy strangers you'll never see again. Until one of you moves, you're stuck with them. White noise machines can help buffer conversational intrusion. If the noise is louder and ongoing, you may want to make a list of your complaints. If you're awoken in the middle of the night, knocking on the wall may be just enough to remind your neighbor that the walls are thin.

2 Politely discuss the noise levels with your neighbors (for safety purposes, you may want to take someone else along). Be factual: Tell them what you can hear and suggest they keep noise levels down late at night. If possible, find humor in the situation (a friend received a letter from her neighbor stating: "We respect people's right to a healthy sex life, but you are keeping our kids up at night"). Your neighbors may be unaware and will want to maintain their privacy. See if you can come up with a mutually agreeable solution. Write down the date when you confronted your neighbors, as you may need it if the issue isn't resolved.

3 If you receive a negative response, or none at all, supply them with a copy of your lease. Most leases contain a clause stating your right to "quiet enjoyment." You might also consider writing your neighbors a letter informing them that if they don't quiet down, you will be notifying the landlord. A letter signed by other neighbors could be additionally effective.

4 If necessary, contact your landlord. Inform him or her of what you've done so far and supply them with a copy of your letter, if you wrote one. You'd be amazed at how much quieter people become if they fear eviction. Calling the police is also an option if the noise is "disturbing the peace," especially if you suspect domestic violence.

THERE'S NO NEED TO GO IT ALONE: FIND A MENTOR

The Broad Experience

ASHLEY MILNE-TYTE

Ashley Milne-Tyte is a radio producer and reporter based in New York City. She hosts a bi-monthly podcast called "The Broad Experience" about women in the workplace.

Last month I attended the annual awards conference of Catalyst, an organization that advocates for women in business. Xerox CEO Ursula Burns was the lunchtime speaker. She was refreshingly blunt, funny and engaging. One of the points she made was that mentors are an important part of a successful career: "Men and women need them, but women need them more."

That made me a bit concerned, as I've never really had one. I asked Tiffany Dufu to spell out just what mentorship can do for women in particular. Dufu is chief leadership officer of Levo League, a startup devoted to getting Generation Y women to the top. Mentorship, she says, "helps you achieve clarity through guidance and encouragement."

Many women want to find a mentor, but it's hard to go about that if there's no obvious candidate lurking in your office. And there may not be, since senior women are relatively thin on the ground. Dufu says you should definitely seek out men as well. She advises mentees not to think about mentorship in terms of one person, a savior who's going to magically elevate your career. "It's valuable to have multiple mentors at one time, because that's how you can shape one element of mentorship, which is learning more about yourself," she says, and adds that various mentors should be giving you messages about yourself that are consistent: "That is how you build a level of self-awareness about what to do next in your career." Levo League now has an online mentorship program allowing members to tap many senior women for advice.

Dufu says she's had wonderful mentors in the past who were totally unconnected to her company or industry — women "who had been around the block several times and could provide guidance." So don't feel your mentor has to be someone from work.

Escape black and white — then live the dream

Loving your job just might be the oldest career objective out there. For the founders of the website "Live in the Grey," it's the idea they hope to make into a movement. Friends Maneesh Goyal and David Munczinski decided that the new crop of entrepreneurship-minded young people would benefit from a place to find out how people like them — with an idea and some passion — were able to merge what they love with what they do. We asked founder Maneesh Goyal for his advice for young professionals.

So, what is your advice for people just starting out?

We believe your first step has to be discovering and defining what moves you. For me, it was as simple as sitting down and writing out "what doesn't feel like work." I took these passions and eventually entered the event marketing industry.

People are making their own paths more frequently now. What's your advice to them?

Before you can chart your own path — whether in a company, as a freelancer or as an entrepreneur — you need to have a clear vision for where you are going, while being open to unforeseen changes. You have to start by truly defining what is fulfilling to you. For us, fulfillment is the cross-section of personal and professional, and fulfillment is fundamentally necessary to sustain anyone in their career. We highlight the stories of people that are "grey" to inspire people to get there on their own.

What scared you most about taking the leap into a new venture?

The most intimidating aspect of starting Live in the Grey was overcoming the fear that our philosophy was only a personal outlook we share as co-founders. Was anyone going to appreciate and be inspired by these ideas? Fortunately, we have found an engaged audience through our site and events. This is always a risk for a person or a group starting a venture with a mission. Our message is "risk makes life remarkable" — and that means redefining risk from something to be scared of into something to embrace. METRO

Gemini | May 22 - June 20. Though you will admirably want to help someone you see struggling, make sure that the person is legitimately in need of help.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. Complications will arise if you're so adamant about having your way that you buck the will of the majority.

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Be careful not to overplay your hand in a collective endeavor. Demanding things be done your way could make opponents.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. Nothing will be gained by arguing with someone whose views differ radically from yours. It might be about something that neither of you can change.

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. If you're swimming in unfamiliar waters, make sure you have a firm grasp of what's what.

Who's afraid of a shrine?

Re: "Don't build a shrine to a bomber" (Metro, May 10-12) Letter writer Brian A. Jones imagines a world of terrorists making a shrine and "a place of pilgrimage" to the Boston Marathon bomber's burial plot. I say, good — if that would really happen. With FBI surveillance that would become an ideal site to identify and survey any sympathizing terrorists stupid enough to appear there. Tell me off the top of your head, if you can: Where are the "shrines" of John Wilkes Booth, Charles Guiteau, Sacco and Vanzetti or Timothy McVeigh? No one knows or cares. You are fearful of something that doesn't actually exist. We need to focus on genuine world problems.

Lundqvist steps up in Game 6 victory

NHL playoffs.

The Rangers rode their defense and goaltending to an all-deciding Game 7.

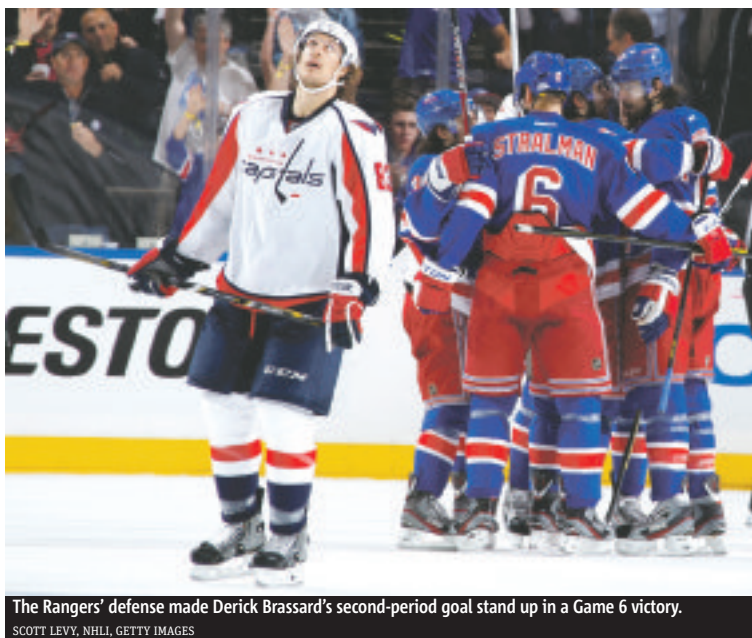

They are two of the most exciting words in sports: Game 7.

The ultimate do-or-die game in sports will be contested at the Verizon Center tonight after the Rangers' pulse-pounding 1-0 win over the Capitals in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference quarterfinals yesterday afternoon at the Garden.

The best-of-seven series is tied at three games apiece. The puck drops for Game 7 at 8 p.m.

"We are just going to have the same mentality we had coming into this game," said Derick Brassard, who scored the game's only goal. "We just played our game [and] had fun. It was positive. The guys were relaxed and that's what we need to do tomorrow."

"We needed it. There was desperation out there," said Henrik Lundqvist, who made 27 saves to earn his seventh career

The Rangers' defense made Derick Brassard's second-period goal stand up in a Game 6 victory.

Shoot the puck

The Rangers have been criticized for their lack of offensive attack much of the postseason — sometimes by the fans in the arena.

- "The crowd kept chanting ['shoot the puck' and] I didn't see myself giving a pass to one of my teammates there. I think I had to shoot," Brassard said. "They obviously want us to shoot. On the ice, it's a little different. We try and make plays. Sometimes it can work. Sometimes it doesn't work."

shutout in the playoffs, and his first since Game 3 of the Eastern Conference finals last May.

The Vezina finalist is tied with Hall of Famer Dave Kerr for the second-most Stanley Cup playoff shutouts in franchise history. Mike Richter's nine playoff shutouts are most in team history.

"I felt like this was going to be the type of game where there were one or two goals, tops," Lundqvist said. "My focus was on trying to shut it down."

He was aided by a defensive effort that mostly limited Washington to shots from the outside as the Rangers finished with 17 blocked shots and out-hit the Capitals, 33-28.

"Everybody contributed," head coach John Tortorella said. "For us to sustain the forecheck and sustain some territory, we needed bodies."

The Capitals did not have a power play in yesterday's game, as the only penalties assessed to the Rangers were roughing minors to Derek Stepan and Dan Girardi in a scrum involving all 10 skaters on the ice at the final buzzer.

"We know what's at stake when we put them on the power play. They can capitalize pretty quickly," Ryan McDonagh said. "One thing that we said every time in-between periods is to use our legs, not our sticks. We have to dictate the tempo and forecheck to create penalties for them."

MLB. Yankees sweep set at Royals behind another Kuroda gem

The Yankees' excellent run of pitching continued yesterday as they swept the Royals a day before heading to Cleveland for an old-fashioned doubleheader. Each of the three games was won by the day's starting pitcher.

Hiroki Kuroda pitched 7 2/3 innings and allowed two runs on six hits to pick up his fifth win of the season. Kuroda has had an excellent start to his season, with three straight outings of at least seven innings and two or fewer earned runs.

Robinson Cano and Vernon Wells provided all the offense the Yankees would need with back-to-back home runs in the third inning.

Mariano Rivera picked up his 15th save of the season on just nine pitches. In Rivera's first return trip to Kansas City since tearing his ACL, he had two saves in the three-game set. METRO

Kuroda lowered his ERA to 2.31 through eight starts.

No shushing

Chamberlain, Rivera clear air

Joba Chamberlain does not like to be shushed and he has no problem telling you.

One day after Chamberlain told future Hall of Famer Mariano Rivera not to "shush" him in front of the media, the two have ironed out the issue. Rivera was speaking to reporters on Saturday when he told Chamberlain, standing nearby, to be quiet. Chamberlain did not take kindly to the suggestion.

But the two relievers spoke about the public disagreement and even posed for a picture then tweeted out to the world.

"It's over with; it's done," Chamberlain said. "It's really not an issue in the first place."

In disappointing on-field news, the Yankees placed Eduardo Nunez on the 15-day DL with sore ribs.

Nunez has not played since May 5 against Oakland. The Yankees called up Alberto Gonzalez, who played with the team from 2007-08, as a replacement. METRO

Giants minicamp

Pugh fitting in at new position

Top draft picks usually get the most scrutiny as teams hold their first rookie minicamp, as the Giants did this weekend. But when you're an offensive lineman, you're used to flying under the radar. Justin Pugh, selected

No. 19 overall in last month's draft, got his first taste of that last Friday when fourth-round selection Ryan Nassib garnered much of the attention. However, it's Pugh, Nassib's college teammate, who is competing for a chance to start.

this weekend, where 32-year-old David Diehl is nearing the end of his career.

"He has been there the whole camp so he is getting better every day — more comfortable with it," head coach Tom Coughlin said. "The language barrier is becoming a little bit easier for him, as it is for the others." The former college teammates were able to joke about the switch.

"I was like, 'Hey, Ryan, now I got your front side as opposed to your backside,'" Pugh said. "He said, 'It's all good, man.' As long as I'm protecting him, he's good with it."

Former Rutgers player fighting for role on Jets

NFL. The Jets are giving a former local product a look this offseason.

There's an intriguing name or two in nearly every NFL team's rookie minicamp. For the Jets, it is Mason Robinson.

Robinson, an unsigned invitee, petitioned the NCAA last year for a sixth season at Rutgers following two season-ending knee injuries. He came into the program as a running back in 2007 then switched to wide receiver, cornerback and eventually safety. Robinson has just 19 career tackles — not the kind of numbers that jump out at an NFL scouting department.

But Robinson was invited to rookie minicamp by head coach Rex Ryan after a conversation he had with the Rutgers coaching staff.

"He was playing some nickel. I like him," Ryan said. "The coaches at Rutgers said that no one at Rutgers wanted to fight this guy. I'm like, 'Wow, that's pretty good for a little corner.' Now we'll have somebody that will fight him, but that is impressive."
